The itinerary is filling up fast, but don't let the season pass without visiting these giants of American art. By Adam Rathe

WHEN IN VERMONT ▲

The Hall Art Foundation in Reading occupies a former farmhouse and its barns; this summer it will exhibit work by Richard Artschwager and Turner Prize winner Malcolm Morley. In nearby Perkinsville, ski season staple the Inn at Weathersfield (WEATHERSFIELDDINN.COM) is charming in warm weather, too. HALLARTFOUNDATION.ORG

SUN TUNNELS

WHEN IN UTAH ▲

If you're seeing Nancy Holt's Sun Tunnels, make it a daytrip from Salt Lake City, where you'll have checked into the Grand America Hotel (GRANDAMERICA.COM). The land-art destination—a sculpture made of concrete tubes that frame a view of the desert and, for about a week around the summer solstice, the setting sun—is about 200 miles from town but most certainly worth the trek. OPERA THEATRE OF ST. LOUIS

WHEN IN MISSOURI ▲

Check into the storied Chase Park Plaza (SONESTA.COM), where Nat King Cole performed, but enjoy off-site music—specifically, at the Opera Theatre of St. Louis, which, beginning June 15, is mounting Fire Shut Up in My Bones, a new opera by Terence Blanchard and Kasi Lemmons, based on Charles Blow's memoir. WHEN IN COLORADO ▼

Who says Aspen's only for winter? This summer book a room at the Little Nell (THELITTLENELL.COM). Then check out the Aspen Music Festival, which opens June 27 and will feature such highlights as Renée Fleming performing with the Emerson String Quartet. ASPENMUSICFESTIVAL.COM

WHEN IN NEW YORK ▼

Manhattan might empty out on summer weekends, but there's still plenty going on. Like "Estructuras Monumentales," an exhibition of works by Carmen Herrera that opens July 11 in City Hall Park. Then cool off upstate, with the Bard SummerScape festival, beginning June 29 (PUBLICARTFUND.ORG, BARD.EDU), and a weekend at the Troutbeck lodge (TROUTBECK.COM) in Amenia.

WHEN IN MONTANA ▼

In the town of Fishtail, a solid daytrip from the luxe Lone Mountain Ranch (LONEMOUNTAINRANCH.COM; GUESTS ARE ENCOURAGED TO BOOK AT LEAST A WEEK), Tippet Rise Art Center is dedicated to chamber music and sculpture. This summer the two are combined when

Xylem, a pavilion designed by Francis Kéré, opens for concerts and contemplation on July 12. TIPPETRISE.ORG

WHEN IN MASSACHUSETTS ▼

This summer Tanglewood will debut its new Linde Center for Music and Learning, as well as such hot-ticket shows as Penelope, a new opera by Tom Stoppard and André Previn (BSO.ORG). Nearby, the Williamstown Theatre Festival opens June 25 with Uma Thurman in Henrik Ibsen's Ghosts (WTFESTIVAL.ORG). Less haunted are rooms at Tourists (TOURISTS.WELCOME.COM), a riverside getaway in nearby North Adams.
